Welcome!

On behalf of Splash! Publications, we would like to welcome you to Vasco Núñez de Balboa, one of twelve lessons in our Spanish Explorers and Conquistadors Unit. This lesson was designed by teachers with you and your students in mind.

The Format

Our goal is a lesson that you can use immediately. No comprehension questions to write, activities to create, or vocabulary words to define. Simply make copies of the lesson for your students and start teaching.

The Vocabulary

Our lessons feature words in bold type. We have included a Glossary to help students pronounce and define the words. Unlike a dictionary, the definitions in the Glossary are concise and written in context. Remember, we’re teachers! Students will be exposed to these vocabulary words in the comprehension activities. They will also be tested on the vocabulary words at the end of the lesson.

Students will be responsible for filling out and studying their vocabulary cards. You may want to have students bring in a small box for storing their vocabulary cards. We don’t have to tell you that incorporating these words into your Reading and Spelling programs will save time and make the words more meaningful for students.

The Lesson Plan

Before reading Vasco Núñez de Balboa, students will:

- complete Vocabulary Cards for abandoned, accused, autobiography, befriended, beheaded, biographies, Caribbean Sea, coast, colony, conquistador, convinced, debt, defeated, denied, dominions, expedition, fertile, governor, Hispaniola, historians, hostile, island, Isthmus of Panama, journal, loyally, mainland, New World, nobleman, preserved, raided, respect, treason, voyages, worshipped.

Vasco Núñez de Balboa was born in Spain. It’s not clear exactly when he was born, but most historians agree that it was probably in 1475. His parents were not wealthy, so young Vasco worked in the household of a rich nobleman who lived on the Atlantic Coast of southwest Spain. Many ships heading for the New World stopped here to pick up supplies and crew members. As sailors returned from their voyages, Vasco heard the stories of land and riches across the Atlantic Ocean.

Voyage to South America

In 1501, Balboa joined a Spanish expedition to South America. The expedition explored the northern coast of present-day Colombia. The group was not able to settle in Colombia because they didn’t have enough men, food, or supplies. Instead, they sailed through the Caribbean Sea to the island of Hispaniola (his•pan•ee•OH•luh).

Balboa used the money he earned from the South American expedition to purchase land and pigs. Unfortunately, the Native Americans on the island of Hispaniola worshipped pigs. They would not buy or eat animals that they worshipped.

Unable to successfully farm or raise pigs, Balboa soon found himself poor and in debt. He wanted to leave Hispaniola and join an expedition that was planning to build the colony of San Sebastián in South America. The people to whom he owed money would not allow him to leave.

In 1510, Balboa left Hispaniola by hiding on a ship that was taking supplies to San Sebastián. The captain discovered Balboa hiding in a barrel. He threatened to throw him off the ship. Balboa’s life was saved because he convinced the captain that his knowledge of the area they were going to could be useful. When they reached San Sebastián, they found that the colonists had abandoned the settlement because of Native American attacks.
SANTA MARÍA

Balboa suggested that they move the colony west to Darién (DAIR•ree•an). According to Balboa, fertile soil and friendlier Native Americans could be found in this area of South America. When they arrived at the spot that Balboa had told them about, they found 500 hostile Native American warriors ready to fight. After a difficult battle, the Spaniards successfully defeated the Native Americans. They raided the Native American village and discovered a treasure of golden ornaments. They named their new settlement Santa María. Santa María was the first permanent settlement on the mainland of South America.

GOVERNOR BALBOA

As a reward for his leadership, Vasco Balboa was chosen as the governor of Santa María. As governor, Balboa had complete power. From his settlement in Santa María, Governor Balboa sailed west along Panama’s coastline, defeating some Native Americans and making friends with others. He explored rivers, mountains, and swamps, searching for gold and capturing slaves. He claimed huge areas of new land for Spain. Balboa wrote to the king of Spain asking for more men, weapons, and supplies for building ships.

Balboa planted corn and received fresh supplies from Hispaniola and Spain. He got his men ready for exploring. He collected a large amount of gold from the ornaments worn by the Native American women. Some of this gold was given to him; most of it he took by force.

In 1513, Governor Balboa heard stories about an area to the south where people were so rich that they ate and drank from dishes made of solid gold. Balboa was warned that he would need at least 1,000 men to defeat the Native Americans living along the coast of what they called “the other sea.”
On September 1, 1513, Balboa led an expedition of about 200 Spaniards, a few Native American guides and a pack of dogs across the Isthmus of Panama. The group included famous explorer Francisco Pizarro (puh•ZAR•roh), whom you will learn about soon. Using a small ship and ten Native American canoes, the group sailed along the coast until they met up with a tribe of Native Americans that Balboa had befriended. They left the Native American village with more than 1,000 men ready for battle. Balboa led his army through 45 miles of Panama’s jungle.

Thirty days later, the expedition reached the sea that Balboa had been told about. Balboa walked into the ocean, dipped his sword in the water, and claimed the water and all of the surrounding land for Spain. He named the new sea Mar del Sur, which means South Sea in English. Today, we know this body of water as the Pacific Ocean.

The most important reason for Balboa’s journey was to find the gold. His large army of Spaniards and Native American warriors easily defeated the native peoples living along the South Sea. As promised, Balboa found riches of gold and pearls. He then learned that more treasure could be found on a group of islands guarded by a powerful and feared tribe of Native Americans. Balboa and a small group of warriors paddled canoes to reach the islands. After a bloody battle, Balboa and his army defeated the Native Americans on the islands. They took as much gold and pearls as they could carry in their canoes. Before leaving, Balboa named the largest island Isla Rica, which means Rich Island.
PEDRO ARIAS
On January 19, 1514, Balboa returned to Santa María a very wealthy man. More importantly, he had discovered the South Sea and claimed new land for Spain. As required by Spanish law, Balboa sent one fifth of his treasure to King Ferdinand in Spain.

Since Balboa had been gone for so long, King Ferdinand chose a new governor for Santa María. His name was Pedro Arias. In July 1514, Pedro Arias arrived in Santa María with men, women, and supplies.

Balboa was angry that he had been replaced as governor. He wanted more than anything to return to the South Sea and continue searching for pearls and gold. Unfortunately, Balboa was no longer in power. It was the governor’s job to decide which explorers led expeditions.

Balboa secretly planned his next expedition. Governor Arias found out about Balboa’s plans and had him arrested. Just as Governor Arias was planning to lock Balboa in a wooden cage, King Ferdinand received news of Balboa’s discoveries and one fifth of the treasure that Balboa had sent. The king saved Balboa’s life.

King Ferdinand told Governor Arias that Balboa was to be shown the greatest respect for all of his accomplishments. Governor Arias obeyed the king. He even arranged for Balboa to marry one of his daughters.

BALBOA’S DEATH
In 1517, Governor Arias permitted Balboa to return to the South Sea. On his way back to Santa María, Balboa was arrested by Francisco Pizarro, the same soldier who had been with him when he discovered the South Sea. Pizarro had been sent by Governor Arias. Balboa was accused of trying to take control of the South Sea for himself. Balboa denied all charges and demanded to be taken to Spain where he could speak with King Ferdinand and receive a fair trial. Governor Arias refused. He ordered that the trial take place immediately.

On January 15, 1519, Vasco Balboa and four of his friends were found guilty of treason. They were sentenced to death. As Balboa was led to the chopping block to have his head removed, he screamed, “Lies, lies! Never have such crimes held a place in my heart. I have always loyally served the King, with no thought in my mind but to increase his dominions.” After Balboa and his four friends were beheaded, their heads were put on public display for several days.

Think about the resources we use to learn about history. Reading books, seeing movies, looking at photographs, studying maps, searching the Internet, digging for bones, and holding pieces of pottery are some of the ways that we learn about the past.

There are two types of sources to help us learn about what happened in the past. Primary sources are recorded by people who were there at the time. If you have ever read a diary or an autobiography, then you were reading something that was written by the person who was actually recording the events and experiences as they were happening. Diaries and autobiographies are primary sources. Letters, interviews, photographs, original maps, bones, and pieces of pottery are other examples of primary sources because they give us “first-hand” knowledge of an event that took place in history.

Secondary sources are recorded by people after an event took place. Many books have been written about important historical events and people. A book written in 1963 about the life of Christopher Columbus is a secondary source because the author wasn’t actually there to interview the famous explorer and can’t give any “first-hand” knowledge. Movies, biographies, newspaper stories, and encyclopedias are other examples of secondary sources because they give us “second-hand” knowledge of events that took place in history.

You have just finished studying about Spanish explorer Vasco Núñez de Balboa.

In this activity, you will decide whether a source of information is a primary source or a secondary source. On the lines provided, put a “P” next to the primary sources and an “S” next to the secondary sources.

1. ______ A piece of wood from one of Balboa’s ships preserved in a museum.

2. ______ A bottle of water from the South Sea.

3. ______ A page from Vasco Núñez de Balboa’s journal.

4. ______ Vasco Núñez de Balboa’s biography.

5. ______ A picture of Governor Pedro Arias drawn by your brother.

6. ______ The original letter that Balboa wrote to King Ferdinand asking for more supplies for his colony.

7. ______ Pieces of gold that Balboa stole from Native Americans on Isla Rica.
Grid Math is a fun way to learn an important skill. Grids are used to find places on maps, to track weather patterns, and in space exploration.

For Example: If you want to locate a place where C meets 3 (C,3), you would go over to C and up to 3. On a map or an atlas, (C,3) may be the place where you would find the name of your city.

Directions: In this activity you will use a grid system to put together a puzzle that should remind you of Spanish conquistador (con•KEE•stah•dor) Vasco Nuñez de Balboa. You will need the 48 puzzle pieces (some of the puzzle pieces are below and the rest of them are on the next page), and the blank grid.

1. Cut out the puzzle pieces one at a time (cut around the thick black line of the square). Glue that piece in its proper place on the empty grid before cutting out the next piece. Make sure that you do not turn the puzzle piece upside down or turn it on its side before gluing it; the way it looks before you cut it out is the way it should be glued onto the grid.

2. Follow the example above: If the puzzle piece is labeled (D,1), glue that piece in the space where D meets 1 on the grid by going over to D and up to 1. (D,1) has been done for you as an example.

3. When you are finished, color in your picture with your coloring pencils.
